Marvin presented a memorial from the President and Directors of the Long Island Railroad Company, requesting the appointment of a Committee of Conference to arrange with them some plan for the satisfactory management of the road, of which the following is abstract:

It represents the great expense of building the railroad, the different Committees having estimated it at $3,000,000, and the real accommodation it affords to passengers between Brooklyn and Greenport, and also contributed essentially to the rapid increase of South Brooklyn; that at first the steep ascent in Atlantic-st. could only be overcome by use of horses, at great cost and delay; that this deficiency has been remedied by paying Atlantic-st. at an expense of $80,000, and by building under the eyes and with the assist of the Corporation of Brooklyn a long and deep cut, at an expense of $100,000, which company has the most favorable and liberal construction; but the legal measures adopted by the Board, and deprives the Company of the benefit of the tunnel, and occasions great delay to passengers and freights; that the speed of locomotives within the city bounds shall be restricted to a moderate rate, rendering them less dangerous than horse-power, the adoption of which would increase rather than diminish the number of accidents; that the removal of the cars under the old system would affect the interests of the mass of the population of Long Island; and on all these grounds memorialists ask the withdrawal of the ordinance, and that the public may have the accommodation of dispatch, by the Company being again permitted to use steam locomotives.

After the reading of the memorial, Ald. Marvin moved the appointment by the Board of a Special Committee of five to confer with the Board, and to whom the people of Brooklyn were subject to be referred. Ald. Marvin moved the motion would be referred to the Special Committee which previously had this subject in charge, and moved as an amendment that the old Committee on Railroads be appointed. Lost—7 ayes, 12 noes. After which the whole question was discussed at great length. When Ald. Stilwell moved that when the Committee was appointed it be instructed to receive no propositions other than those presented in writing, which was lost, and on the main question being put it was carried.
